Dulles Urges Strong Guard

CIA Chief Says Reds Increase Subversion

Seoul (INS)—Allen W. Dulles, director of the United States Central Intelligence Agency, urged the Free World Monday to combat what he termed "intensified" Communist subversion with an "adequate military posture."

The chief of the super-secret CIA made the statement at a Seoul news conference after he emerged from a meeting with South Korean President Syngman Rhee.

He arrived in Seoul from Tokyo Monday morning on the last leg of a two-month world tour.

Mr. Dulles said he found out during his trip that free nations have established a defense pattern which has forced Russia and its satellites to "realize they cannot move forward by their old tactics of open aggression."

"However," he warned, "I do not think the Communist countries have relaxed in their subversive actions and infiltrations."

He outlined what he described as the most effective program: Development of "a strong and healthy economy to satisfy the people with rising living standards, plus adequate military posture and well-trained internal security forces."
